Such bliss emanated from my speakers this morning as I floated for just under two minutes with the artist Fransoafran. This neo-classical moment of utter heaven is called A Wish, and I think by listening to this heavenly piece I must have made one this morning.

The composition is lush and deeply moving, the symbiosis between piano and violin was simply perfect, and my only complainant was I could have swam in this musical heaven for at least another two more minutes or even longer. This is music that transcends beauty itself, and another big singles hit for the artist surely.
