The new EP from Mythos is the fresh injection of quality music the genre needed, after a long hot summer and with autumn now in flow we can reflect upon this really charming collection of great sounds from the artist.

The smoothness of the first piece entitled Kawakari is such a perfect place for us to start, as it has a lovely energy about its construction. I adore the guitar combination with the wordless vocals; the percussion gently drives this song along and manifests a wonderful start to this compilation of fine tracks.

Mythos named the project for this ep Eros, and well named it is indeed, living here in Cyprus he is well known for more than one reason. I believe Eros in Greek means Desire and some people still to this day believe he is one of the sons of Aphrodite, the goddess of our country. The wordless vocals on the title track could easily be Aphrodite calling out for Eros over the eons of time. The syncopation of the percussion is divine, but as a guitarist myself I simply fell in love with the melodic creation of this track, one I could listen to for ages.

The blissful rhythms of Cantana are up next, the back drop of a lush mood filled synthesiser is here too, the keyboards symbiotic collaboration with the overall mix is sublime, but the addition of a light guitar and vocalisations which were added have taken this particular piece to a whole new level.

We drift to the penultimate doorway of this release and come across an offering entitled Allure, the repeating motif on the keyboards sets the scene, and then the genius of the acoustic guitar manifest something so very special indeed, a track filled with such a sumptuous global and chilled world beat, all to a very clever backdrop of some very gentle, but crafted synths and keyboards.

The final portal on the ep is entitled Song from a Sad Dream. The acoustic qualities here of the guitar are vital in creating a reflective mood, the whole piece contains such a moving energy about its arrangement and is very well named, the added element of an almost symphonic texture in this composition has created something deeply moving and emotive.

Eros by Mythos is a very classy production of five quality tracks produced by artists who clearly are masters of their trade, each of the compositions have been manifested with care, attention and partnered with a sublime production of excellence. So if you need your day lightened and you wish to bathe in music of a superior nature, then I would recommend the all-encompassing Eros by Mythos it is simply delightful.
