I listened to this single several times this Sunday, as I am always usually in a meditative mood on that day. Wayne Bethanis has a really distinctive style as a pianist, a very passionate and colourful performance can always be found when listening to his music and that can be found here on this piece too.

I Am (A Musical Meditation) is a fascinating composition, it seems to manifest different moods and have them all sit around the musical table at the same time, one can find a smooth sense of ambience here, a sense of a meditative energy as well, but what Bethanis does so well is create such emotive segments within a piece that fit so well, as he does with such style at the mid-way point of this new single.

I Am (A Musical Meditation) is three minutes plus of full flowing solo piano and this opus of tone is going to bring a little peace and inspiration to the listener; this is a musical statement by the artist, and it makes its point felt with beauty and a thoroughly professionally crafted performance.
