

Flute Dance

By

Jan Michael Looking Wolf

& Robin Gentlewolf

Written by

Steve Sheppard

My very first thoughts when I first listened to this album were wow, this is so uplifting, I had only hit on the opening track Flutes Rising and I was totally hooked in line and sinker, the guitar here was breathtakingly sparkling as well as the flutes.

By the time I had arrived at the piece Heart Dance, I soon realised that what I was listening to, was something truly special. Flute Dance the album is so sprightly and light, it is an absolute pleasure to listen to.

It's a blissful experience to listen to music like this from artists who have extremely similar ideas to our own mantra of, bringing the world together through music, and if you listen to the energy raising Healing Circle you may understand more, the use of flute and hand drum here is brilliant, you can feel the healing flow in abundance from the composition.

There is a mournful repose, but one so beautiful, to be found on Earth Harmony literally every hair on my body stood to attention. Then the soothing winds on the piece Gentlewolf will take you on a running with the pack moment, while the amazing title track Flute Dance has such a melodic sense of purpose it was hard not to be deeply moved by its tones and performances within.

This is a 12 track release, packed full of stunning compositions, excellent Native flute performances, born from the fires of love and respect and offered to us, with a true openness of heart. Jan Michael Looking Wolf and Robin

Gentlewolf have probably created the most empowering album of the year with Flute Dance, and one that I am more than happy to honour by saying those magical five words, this album is thoroughly recommended.