I had been listening to some extremely chilled classical music whilst reading my book over this festive period, when suddenly the opportunity came up to write a review for Rick Spark's latest single, his version of the classic Auld Lang Syne, quite appropriately for this time of year.

I was still in a place of bliss thanks to his Half Moon Bay album and here we have more of the same beauty in music, the same wonderful floating and angelic narrative is given to this endless piece of peace.

Sparks has really done this famous opus justice and created for us probably the most uplifting and soulful version ever of this composition, the style is a real mixture of classical, new age and a little Celtic, all masterfully arranged and gifted to us the ever eager listener.

If you would really like a warm and loving version of this song, then without a doubt I can recommend this version by Rick Sparks, it's guaranteed to bring a smile to your face and a hug to your heart, and of course simply the best musical way to end the year.
