

The Immortal

By

Matias Bacoňsky

Written by

Steve Sheppard

Matias Bacoňsky is a pianist of great imagination and intensity and here on his latest single he brings to the table, in my view, his greatest and most powerful work to date.

The Immortal is one of those tracks that will leave every single hair on your body standing to attention, it's easily the best work of the artist and is a continuation of his last album When the World Ends.

The style and performance here is film score with ease, and if any movie producer should read this, then this should be your music for any narration that requires a deep sense of aloneness, or a scene that has an end of the world scenario. The sheer emotion within this piece is almost heart breaking, and one can see with ease The Immortal walking the empty streets of our barren world in desperation, and within a lonely singularity weighing heavily on his shoulders.

The intensity of this project far surpasses most other singles I have heard for quite some time and Bacoňsky has really raised the bar for the future to come, all one can hope for now is that time spins faster so we can hear the new album that this is going to come from. The Immortal is without doubt the best single I have heard for ages and should be a part of everyone's musical collection, an outstanding work of art indeed.