The latest single from Wayne Gratz graces my media player with one of the most attractive singles in the solo piano genre I have heard for quite some time, the sheer fluency of this piece is a beauty to be sampled on its own, but Gratz's ability to create a compelling mental movie through music is transcendent.

The obvious sense of movement is so well played, and one that could conjure up many images within the mind's eye. The mood created here is deeply reflective, so much so, that it could be easy to imagine that through the music, we could be watching the spirit of a young dancer moving silently across the floor of a dust and sun dappled ballroom.

Gratz has indeed created one of the finest solo piano singles this year in my view, and one I am sure will be loved by the legions of fans of this genre, who will also be equally moved by its emotive and artistic content.
