I find it fascinating to see how the mind works, when I heard the first few bars of this new single by Scholler, Deepskyblue (Slow Part) a Tim Burton movie came to the fore front of my mind. The slow and gentle musical narrative was a memory palace of past events all rolled into one dusty attic of reflective passages of time.

There is something quite addictive about this piece that seems to hold your attention; it has you constantly reaching for the repeat button. It's now my fourth listen in a row and the haunting energies still resonate around me, it's subtle but beautiful nature still fills me with a desire to have more, leaving me to finish by saying that Deepskyblue (Slow Part), has to be one of the most intoxicating singles I have heard for a while.
